Re Provinces Face Calls To Make New National Day For Truth and Reconciliation A Statutory Holiday (Sept. 29) and An Important Day For Canada's Relationship With Indigenous Peoples (Sept. 30):

As much as I share the sentiments expressed by contributor Dakota Kochie, I think that holidays in honour of a cause rarely do anything to further the cause.

However, if we're looking for a symbolic gesture that at least does no harm, how about putting the National Day for Truth and Reconciliation in place of Victoria Day?
