Writing in the Disciplines

• writing-to-learn activities are short, impromptu or otherwise informal writing tasks that help students think through key concepts or ideas presented in a course
• Based on learning to write research in 1960s-1970s in US/UK
• First programs emerged in 1980s

WAC Philosophy

• that writing is the responsibility of the entire academic community,
• that writing must be integrated across departmental boundaries,
• that writing instruction must be continuous during all four years of undergraduate education,
• that writing promotes learning, and
• that only by practicing the conventions of an academic discipline will students begin to communicate effectively within that discipline.

Writing in the Disciplines

• Tie the writing task to specific pedagogical goals.
• Note rhetorical aspects of the task, i.e., audience, purpose, writing situation.
• Make all elements of the task clear.
• Include grading criteria on the assignment sheet.
• Break down the task into manageable steps.

What is WAC?

A writing-intensive course is one in which writing is used as a tool for learning and developing understanding of subject matter and is taught as a means of communication in discipline-specific ways. Students are shown, rather than simply told, how to write in the genres most valued in the discipline and are given opportunities to use skilled feedback in the revision and rewriting of major papers.
